19th GARS Junior Research Workshop European Prizes in Aviation Economics and Management

9-10 June 2022, Hybrid Workshop

Supported by the Hogeschool van Amsterdam and the Air Transport Research Society (ATRS), GARS, the Bremen University of Applied Sciences and The Hong Kong Polytechnic University are happy to host the 19th GARS Junior Workshop on 9-10 June 2022 in hybrid (online/offline) format.

Contact to fellow researchers is often limited especially in the early stages of an academic career. The GARS Junior Workshop is an ideal and rather informal platform to share aviation-related research work with other students and experienced researchers in the field. We accept unpublished papers stemming from an ongoing thesis project, or from a thesis project which was completed within the last 2 years (since June 2020). Submitted papers may be work in progress, preliminary drafts or final drafts. All submissions will be evaluated by experienced reviewers. This year's workshop will include paper presentations and "one-slide/poster sessions." The latter involves offline poster presentations or one-slide presentations in parallel online sessions (the idea is that participants can freely switch from one online session to another). Another feature is the GARS School in Air Transport Economics for GARS members (June 11-12) (see a separate call for the details).

All submissions to the GARS Junior Workshop will be considered for the Best Paper Prizes sponsored by The Hong Kong Polytechnic University and Routledge. There are two prizes in the categories Bachelor/Master (up to 400 EUR) and PhD/Doctoral (up to 600 EUR) as well as book vouchers from Routledge Publishers. The handover ceremony will be held during this year's European Aviation Conference.

Topics

The list of hot topics in aviation economics and management and related disciplines is long and attracts a growing number of Bachelor, Master, Diploma or PhD/doctoral students. Topic examples are market exit and bankruptcies in air transport; hybridization of airline business models; shortcomings of the current slot allocation regime; air transport forecasting; airport and ATC congestion; environmental footprint of the air transport sector; economic regulation, liberalization and privatization; and – of course – Covid-19 impacts and prospects.

Venue, registration cost, scholarships

- The workshop will take place on 9-10 June 2022 in hybrid format. It is free of charge but we encourage all participants to contribute by becoming a GARS member.
- Please indicate in your submission whether you apply for a Hartmut-Wolf scholarship which, if approved, can partly or fully cover your trip costs to Germany/Bremen.

Abstract & Paper Submission:

- Please submit an abstract (400 words maximum) by email no later than 24th April 2022 to sven.maertens@dlr.de. The file should be named [Last name]_JRW2022_[BA/MA/PhD]_abstract.pdf whereby BA stands for Bachelor, and MA for Master and PhD for PhD/doctoral students. The abstract should follow the following structure: Background/Relevance and Objective, Literature, Methodology, and (expected) Results. Please indicate if you prefer a oral or poster presentation.
- Information on acceptance will be provided by 1 May 2022.
- Full papers will be due 22 May 2022.

Contact

- For further information please contact Achim I. Czerny (achim.czerny@polyu.edu.hk) or Sven Maertens (sven.maertens@dlr.de). You are also invited to check the G.A.R.S. website at www.garsonline.de.
