

9th GARS/EAC Online Panel Discussion
Covid-19 – challenges for regional airports

Tuesday, 20 April 10:00am to 11:30am CEST

In cooperation with GARS, the European Aviation Conference, the Bremen University of Applied Sciences and the ATM Policy Institute, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University hosts the ninth GARS Online Panel Discussion on Covid and aviation. Have perspectives for regional airports changed since the start of the Covid-19 pandemic? Is there an optimal number of regional airports in a state? Whether and -if yes- how should governments financially support regional airports? Is there a best-practice regional airport infrastructure? How should an efficient ATC system look like at regional airports? This session brings experts together to discuss these various aspects pertaining to regional airports during the Covid-19 pandemic.

Panellists (in alphabetical order):

Marek Bekier, ACR Aviation Capacity Resources AB, Stockholm
Peter Forsyth, Monash University, Melbourne
Noel Hiney, Dublin City University
David Starkie, Case Associates, London
Tolga Ülkü, IU International University of Applied Sciences, Berlin

Moderator

Andrew Charlton, Managing Director of Aviation Advocacy

PROGRAM

The online session starts at 10:00am CEST. The panel will be very interactive and attendees are welcome to share their questions and comments via the chat function. There will be enough time for intense debates between the panellists and the audience. The online event will end no later than 11:30am CEST.
